Mission

Our mission is to provide breast prostheses for uninsured and under served women suffering with breast cancer. AugMe Foundation is committed to giving breast cancer survivors hope and security while building their self esteem and making them feel whole again.

My journey has lead me to places and people I would never have seen nor met if not for my diagnosis of breast cancer in 2002. There have been so many inspiring and miraculous encounters that I feel compelled to share them with the world.

I must tell my story and spread the word of hope, love, and inspiration so that others will know the true meaning of living a happy life regardless of your circumstance. I have taken my experience and chosen topics that are keys to living a happy and healthy life. I am available to share these secrets through public speaking at events, churches, schools, hospitals, businesses, clubs, organizations, etc. My goal is to share the art of giving and receiving positive energy that I believe will propel a brand new consciousness throughout the 21st century.

AugMe Foundation raises funds to purchase breast prostheses for under served women with breast cancer as well as accepts used prostheses for women with breast cancer. Medicare is currently reviewing their policy to consider including coverage for breast prostheses and I am hopeful their affirmative decision will happen sometime this year.

The AugMe Foundation is also working to provide breast prostheses for women in Ghana as part of a program spearheaded by Dr. Lisa Newman, Surgical Oncologist, Associate Professor of Surgery and Director of the Breast Care Center for the University of Michigan.

Testimonials

"Dawn Spencer has a cancer journey that even CNN thought was worthy of documenting. Dawn is eloquent and honest and Dawn's strength and determination are contagious. Dawn's passion to bring prosthetic devices to under served cancer survivors through her AugMe Foundation is so compelling that I became the first donor!"
